

A WORTHING GAZETTE EDITORIAL OF THE 25th
AUGUST 1909 EXPLAINS THE ABSENCE OF RICHARD LONG'S "DICK TURPIN" ARTICLES.

" DICK'S TURPIN'S " DISAPPEARANCE FROM THE " GAZETTE."

A Lament From India.

IT will doubtless have been noticed that the Cycling Notes by "Dick Turpin," which have been a familiar feature of this page for some years past, have not been published during the present season. The reason is that the writer's business engagements would not permit him to continue his contributions. No one regrets the circumstance more than ourselves, but that this regret is generally shared is shown by the accompanying letter, which reaches us from Bangalore, and is written by a Military Officer who has local associations. He writes :

"What has become of 'Dick Turpin?' I have always looked forward to his articles in the summer ; but this summer I have missed them.

To ramble with him along the well-loved and well-remembered Sussex highways and bye-ways, which his quiet and unassuming style brought back so vividly, was a pleasure which we exiles can ill afford to lose!"

For the moment it is quite impossible for "Dick Turpin" to resume his position as a contributor to our columns ; but if the future should provide him with the opportunity of exercising his facile pen again we shall certainly gladly welcome his return.

25.8.09 P2C5:

“DICK’S TURPIN’S” DISAPPEARANCE FROM THE “ GAZETTE.”

A Lament From India.

IT will doubtless have been noticed that the Cycling Notes by “ Dick Turpin,” which have been a familiar feature of this page for some years past, have not been published during the present season. The reason is that the writer’s business engagements would not permit him to continue his contributions. No one regrets the circumstance more than ourselves, but that this regret is generally shared is shown by the accompanying letter, which reaches us from Bangalore, and is written by a Military Officer who has local associations. He writes:

“What has become of ‘Dick Turpin?’ I have always looked forward to his articles in the summer; but this summer I have missed them.

To ramble with him along the well-loved and well-remembered Sussex highways and bye-ways, which his quiet and unassuming style brought back so vividly, was a pleasure which we exiles can ill afford to lose!”

For the moment it is quite impossible for “Dick Turpin” to resume his position as a contributor to our columns; but if the future should provide him with the opportunity of exercising his facile pen again we shall certainly gladly welcome his return.
